Kayla DeEsch

With a passion for social justice and a drive to influence meaningful change, I am a dedicated advocate committed to tackling systemic injustices head-on. My journey into social justice advocacy began as a Social Justice Analyst at Florida State University where I contributed to research projects addressing critical issues such as racial discrimination and implicit bias. My academic background, including a Master of Arts in Forensic Psychology and a Master of Legal Studies, equips me with a unique interdisciplinary perspective for analyzing public policies and advocating for complex societal issues. Beyond my professional endeavors, I am driven by a genuine passion for knowledge, constantly seeking opportunities to broaden my understanding of social dynamics and finding ways to serve my community.

Andy Williams Jr.

Andy Williams Jr., is an abolitionist, minister, social entrepreneur, and applicant for President of the United States," is taking a bold stand against the modern-day practice of legalized slavery. a battle that resonates deeply with the core values of justice and equality.

Williams' campaign represents a movement that seeks to bring the government back to its roots, serving as a protector of our unalienable rights. His vision extends beyond partisanship, aiming for a government that transcends divisions and works for the common good of all American people. It's time for a new government, one that truly represents the spirit and aspirations of a political body of people.
